

Organized by André SANTINI, the Worldwide Forum on e-democracy has taken place every year since 2000. Its goal is to provide a regular meeting place to analyze and discuss information and communication technologies and their impact on daily life, especially democratic life. The forum has become one of the largest and most important events for international exchange on the topic, bringing together more than 1,000 participants, including elected officials, professionals, administrators, and ordinary citizens from Europe, North and Latin America, Africa and Asia; in 2003, participants from more than 35 countries attended.
